
BACKGROUND

IAPS-International Association for People-Environment Studies is the forum for scholars who have an interest in an interdisciplinary exchange and in the study of the transactions and interrelationships between people and their socio-physical surroundings (including built and natural environments) and the relation of this field to other social and biological sciences and to the environmental professions. The scope of IAPS reflects the scientific and practical capabilities and aspirations in work concerning people in their environments. IAPS has several networks which are interest and research groups formed by IAPS members. They carry out debates, discussion groups, publications, often possess their own website and organize symposia and conferences.

IAPS-CS 'Culture and Space network' was established in 1997 with the aim of examining and engaging with issues related to culture and space interactions in the built environment. To achieve this we organise scientific meetings such as symposia, workshops; encourage research studies; produce publications; circulate information between researchers; and promote the study of socio-cultural issues in architectural, planning and design education. These activities can be grouped into 6 main categories.

- 1. International Symposium Series take place approximately every four years.
- 2. International Symposia Series takes place within the IAPS main conferences and other conferences.
- 3. IAPS International Joint Network Symposium Series.
- 4. National Culture and Space Symposium Series. This series is organized in Turkey with a number of international key-note speakers from the IAPS community every two years.
- 5. Culture and Space Architectural Design Workshops
- 6. The National culture and Space Student Meeting Series: Design workshops, article anthology/essay competition, design competition, exhibition, colloquium/symposium

AIM OF THE NETWORK

The aim of the Network is to identify issues and problems related to culture and space interactions in the built environment and facilitate elaborative research studies within an interdisciplinary framework. It is also intended:

- to exchange of information and dissemination of research findings,
- to organize meetings such as symposium, workshop,
- to promote research on the topic.
- to bring together graduate, postgraduate and PhD students to network and collaborate.
